ips brisbane * brobstigon is at work. Morning peeps \o hey folks is there a room set up for askubuntu I'd like to find out how to get my xubuntu machine to recognise my 4TB usb drive *how to get my USB drive to recognise my xubuntu machine looking for more info on the same on askubuntu morning bigcalm MartijnVdS czajkowski and everyone else. hey czajkowski: what sort of file system is on the drive? dwatkins: not sure I have the permissions to see it not sure if it even matters the drive is recognised by my machine but not the machine in the askubuntu page to to the settings but when I do that it says its a 400gig drive when it is 4TB and the website that it is talking about is working so its a dupe the other answer on that page was to use gparted and it did have my missing disk in it but I dont know why it doesnt see the drive as 4TB it has the xubuntu splash and has my drive when it boots so it's showing in gparted when it sees it have you tried taking it out, running gparted, putting it back in and seeing if it's recognised? already did that the drive is always recognised when I plug it in but not when I plug it in to the machine on that page 82157476af
