Q: Angular2 app makes http call in component, but controller returns null data I am currently doing a very basic test of Angular2 and REST API, in the end I want to use it in a bigger application. My Problem is, that I can get the data through my API, but I get data through the call in my component and there controller has the data it should get. I have already checked through google if anyone had this problem. My code in my console seems like this: `OrderService.getAll().subscribe( result => { console.log(result); }, error => console.log(error) );` This calls the service function `getAll()` which should return an array with objects. My Service and Component look like this: `Service: import { Injectable } from '@angular/core'; import { Http, Response } from '@angular/http'; import { Observable } from 'rxjs/Observable'; import 'rxjs/Rx`

The term "tweener" has a "threatening connotation, " says @cdnaika. You can make the argument that the plight of a tweener can simply be avoided entirely if you've got a thick beard, which for some reason hasn't been gracing the faces of the many smarmy food critics and food writers (the exception being @danielle_green). But this article is meant to be about food, not beards. Here are some of the most important things that can be learned from a study of the beards around the world. 1. Everyone's a beader Humanity has over 70,000 species of animals, and they produce an estimated 3 billion tons of droppings. Bearded species fare much better. Bearded animals have an estimated 5,500,000
